Slide 2: Healthy vs Unhealthy Relationships

Healthy relationships — friendship, family, romantic — share the same core qualities. Learn them and you will always know the difference.

Quality	What It Looks Like — Healthy	What It Looks Like — Unhealthy
Respect	Values your opinions, listens, never mocks you publicly	Dismisses your feelings, mocks you in front of others, ignores what you say
Trust	Believes you, no constant checking of phone or location	Reads your messages without permission, demands to know your location always, accuses you constantly
Communication	Can discuss anything — even hard topics — without fear	Shuts down difficult conversations, yells, sulks, uses silence as punishment
Independence	Encourages your friendships, goals, and interests outside the relationship	Isolates you from friends and family, jealous of time spent with others, monitors your social media
Safety	You feel physically and emotionally safe — no walking on eggshells	You feel afraid to disagree, afraid of their reaction, or have experienced physical aggression

Slide 3: Red Flags & Love Bombing — Spot Them Early

Unhealthy relationships rarely start badly. They escalate gradually. Recognising red flags early — before emotional investment is deep — is your greatest protection.

KEY TERM: Love Bombing

A manipulation tactic where a person overwhelms you with excessive attention, gifts, constant messages, and dramatic declarations of love very early in a relationship. It feels amazing — but the goal is to create emotional debt and dependency so that control can be established later. Real love develops over time, not in days.

Red Flag	What They Say / Do	What It Really Means
Extreme jealousy	'I'm jealous because I love you so much'	Jealousy is about control and insecurity — not love

Red Flag	What They Say / Do	What It Really Means
Isolation	'Your friends don't really care about you like I do'	Removing your support network makes you easier to control and harder to leave
Checking your phone / monitoring	'I just need to know you're safe / faithful'	This is surveillance, not care — trust means not needing to check constantly
Threats when you try to set limits	'I'll hurt myself / you / your family if you leave'	This is coercion and emotional abuse — a serious red flag requiring immediate help
Physical violence 'once'	'It won't happen again — I was just angry'	Violence almost always escalates. Once is not an accident — it is a pattern beginning

■ ■ ■ If you recognise these signs

■ You are not overreacting. Your feelings are valid. You deserve better. Talk to a trusted adult, school counsellor, or call Childline 116. You do not have to manage this alone.

Slide 4: Consent — The FRIES Model

Consent is not complicated — it is the foundation of all healthy relationships. Every person — regardless of age, gender, or relationship status — has the absolute right to consent.

Letter	What It Means	What Violates It
F — Freely given	Given without any pressure, fear, manipulation, or expectation	'You would if you loved me' / gifts with expectations / threatening consequences
R — Reversible	Anyone can change their mind at any time — even mid-activity — no explanation needed	'But you agreed earlier' / continuing after someone says stop / guilt-tripping for changing mind
I — Informed	The person fully understands what they are agreeing to	Lying about intentions / misleading about what will happen / using alcohol to cloud judgment

Letter	What It Means	What Violates It
E — Enthusiastic	A genuine, clear yes — not reluctant, hesitant, or under pressure	Silence / 'I guess so' / not saying no because you feel you can't
S — Specific	Yes to this situation — not a blanket yes to anything and everything	'You said yes last time so it means yes always' / assuming agreement in relationships

Slide 5: Online Relationships & Grooming — Stay Safe

Online friendships can be genuine and positive — but they carry specific risks that offline relationships do not. Knowing these protects you.

KEY TERM: Online Grooming

When an adult builds a false friendship with a young person online — through flattery, gifts, special attention, and gradually pushing physical or digital boundaries — in order to exploit them sexually or financially. Groomers are skilled at seeming like the perfect friend who 'understands you better than anyone.'

Grooming Warning Sign	What It Looks Like	What To Do
Excessive gifts or money	Sending airtime, data bundles, gifts with no clear reason	Ask: why is an adult giving me things? Tell a trusted adult
Secrecy pressure	'Don't tell your parents about us' / 'This is just between you and me'	Real friends never need to be kept secret. Block and report immediately
Requests for private photos	'Just send me one photo — I won't show anyone'	NEVER share private photos. Once sent, you lose all control. Report to trusted adult
Pushing to meet offline alone	'Let's meet this weekend — but just the two of us, don't tell anyone'	Never meet an online contact alone. Tell a trusted adult before any meeting
Identity mismatch	Profile photo looks like a teen but conversations feel like an adult; inconsistent details	Video call to verify. If they refuse — block and tell a trusted adult

Omondi, 16, Kisumu, had been chatting for 3 months with someone claiming to be a 16-year-old girl from Nairobi. She sent airtime, said he was 'the only one who truly understood her,' and asked for a selfie 'just for her.' Then she asked to meet alone that weekend. Omondi told his older brother, who did a reverse image search on the profile photo — it belonged to a stolen identity. The account was actually operated by a 38-year-old man. Omondi's decision to tell someone saved him from serious harm.

Slide 7: Real Talk — What Would You Do?

Pick your choice and see the consequence.

Slide 8: Leaving Safely & Building Positive Relationships

Leaving an unhealthy relationship is often the most dangerous time. Planning makes it safer. And building better relationships starts with knowing what you deserve.

Step	What To Do	Why It Matters
1. Tell a trusted adult first	Counsellor, parent, teacher — before you end it	Safety support and plan in place; adults can help if there is retaliation
2. Do it in a public place	Or with a trusted friend present as a witness	Reduces risk of physical aggression in the moment
3. Be clear and brief	'This relationship is over' — no long explanations that invite debate	Long explanations give abusers room to argue, manipulate, or guilt-trip
4. Limit contact after	Block on all platforms if safe to do so	Continued contact gives them opportunity to re-establish control
5. If threatened — get help immediately	GBV Hotline: 1195 / Police: 999 / Childline: 116	Threats after a breakup are taken seriously by police — you have legal protection
Support Resource	Contact	For
Childline Kenya	116	Under 18s in any crisis — free, 24/7

Support Resource	Contact	For
GBV Hotline Kenya	1195	Gender-based violence — free, 24/7
School Counsellor	Your school	Relationship concerns, abuse, mental health — free & confidential
Police / Emergency	999 / 112	Immediate physical danger
